Introduction

The goal of this book is to help children improve their skills in both reading and comprehension on a daily basis. The more experience a child has with reading, the stronger his or her reading and problem-solving skills will become. Daily Warm Ups: Reading (Grade 2) is composed of short passages which provide both factual and fictional material. Questions which follow are based on Bloom's Taxonomy, higher-level thinking skills, and national standards which are required for grade two learners. Using this book in your daily routine will boost children's reading and comprehension scores significantly.

Nonfiction and Fiction

Daily Warm Ups: Reading is divided into two sections: fiction (narrative) and nonfiction (expository). Each of the two sections is divided into five categories. The nonfiction section includes the following: animals, biographies, American history, science, and current events. The fiction section includes the following: fairy tales and folklore, historical fiction, contemporary fiction, mystery/adventure/suspense, and fantasy.

Because understanding both types of literature is extremely important to our student's success, exposure to both fiction and nonfiction reading is essential. Questions which follow the passages are strategically written to address concepts and strategies which are required nationwide.

Comprehension Questions

Comprehension is the most important goal of any reading assignment. Students who comprehend what they read perform better in class, score higher on tests, and perform tasks in life more confidently. Questions that follow the reading passages are written to encourage students to recognize structure of the text, visualize, summarize, learn new vocabulary, and implement strategies for breaking words into parts for better comprehension. Reading skills used in Daily Warm-Ups: Reading can also be found in scope and sequence charts across the nation. Different types of questions are written to help students become more confident in the following:

- Comparing/contrasting
- Recognizing facts/opinions
- Synonyms/antonyms
- Author purpose
- Multi-meaning words
- Recognizing main idea
- Word structure (prefix/suffix)
- Understanding vocabulary

- Recalling details
- Identify types of sentences
- Making simple inferences/predictions
- Homophones/long and short vowels
- Blends/ compound words
- Describing character traits

Readability

Each of the reading passages in Daily Warm-Ups: Reading (Grade 2) varies in difficulty to meet the various reading levels of your students. The passages have been categorized as follows: below grade level, at grade level, and above grade level. (See Leveling Chart on page 175.)

Record Keeping

Use the tracking sheet on page 6 to record which warm-up exercises you have given to your students. Or, distribute copies of the sheet for students to keep their own records. Use the certificate on page 176 as you see fit. You can use the certificate as a reward for students completing a certain number of warm-up exercises. Or, you may choose to distribute the certificates to students who complete the warm-up exercises with 100% accuracy.

How to Make the Most of This Book

Here are some simple tips, which you may have already thought of, already implemented, or may be new to you. They are only suggestions to help you make your students as successful in reading as possible.

- Read through the book ahead of time so you are familiar with each portion. The better you understand how the book works, the easier it will be to answer students' questions.
- Set aside a regular time each day to incorporate Daily Warm-Ups into your routine. Once the routine is established, students will look forward to and expect to work on reading strategies at that particular time.
- Make sure that any amount of time spent on Daily Warm-Ups is positive and constructive. This should be a time of practicing for success and recognizing it as it is achieved.
- Allot only about five minutes to Daily Warm-Ups. Too much time will not be useful, too little time will create additional stress.
- Be sure to model the reading and question answering process at the beginning of the year before students attempt to do the passages on their own. Modeling for about five days in a row seems to be a good start. Model pre-reading questions, reading the passage, highlighting information which refers to the questions, and eliminating answers which are obviously wrong. Finally, refer back to the text once again, to make sure the answers chosen are the best ones.
- Create and store overheads of each lesson so that you can review student work, concepts, and strategies as quickly as possible.
- Utilize peer tutors which have strong skills for peer interaction to assist with struggling students.
- Offer small group time to students which need extra enrichment or opportunities for questions regarding the text. Small groups will allow many of these students, once they are comfortable with the format, to achieve success independently.
- Adjust the procedures, as you see fit, to meet the needs of all your students.

THE GIRAFFE

The giraffe has a tall, long neck that helps the giraffe get food from high places. The giraffe can bite leaves off of the top of a tree, and it can munch flowers on a roof.

A male will fight with his neck. This is called neck fighting. Two males hit each other with their heads, and they fight until they get tired. The giraffe that stops the fight wins.

A giraffe also uses his neck to keep safe. His long neck helps him to see danger when it is out in the grass. The giraffe watches for lions and other dangerous animals. The mother giraffe can be eating far away and can still keep an eye on her babies. She holds her head high and keeps looking around.

To stay alive, giraffes have to stand tall!

CATS

Cats have things that help them catch mice. These things also help cats get away.

Cats use these to feel their way in the dark, and they use them to find out how large a hole is. They also use these when the air moves. These things help tell the cat if there is a wall, a bed, or an object from the air that hits them. The cat uses these to feel its food on the ground. They tell the cat if a mouse is about to get away. If a twig hits it, the cat will blink to protect its eyes because these things let it know quickly that something is coming toward it.

Do you know what part of a cat this is? It is the whiskers! They give the cat feeling. They guide and save the cat from getting hurt. They help your cat go through its day and night happy.

TIGER

Did you know that tigers look like big cats? Most of them live in the wild; however, some people buy them for pets. Other people look at them in the zoo.

If tigers become pets, the people who own them are still not always safe. Tigers will purr like a cat, and they will lick your arm. Sometimes they will go where you go. They love to play, but they are still wild animals. People who have tigers for pets need to remember that tigers can still get mad and cannot be trusted. Tigers can bite. If they put their ears flat, do not go near them. If they curl their lips, it is not safe to be near them.

At the zoo, the tigers live in a cage. People can walk by and look at them. The people who look at them cannot pet them or feed them. The tigers can walk in their cage, and they can lie in the sun. People can see the orange and black on their coats, and they can hear them growl. As long as the people stay outside of the cage, they are safe.

Just remember that whether you see a tiger in the wild, as a pet, or in the zoo, the tiger may look pretty, but it is not safe.

STORY QUESTIONS

- 1. Where do most tigers live?
 - a. in the zoo

c. in the wild

b. with people as pets

- d. at the park
- 2. The word bite could be changed to . . .
 - a. "make a loud noise."

c. "put their teeth into."

b. "walk in their cage."

- d. "swim in the water."
- 3. The word tigers means . . .
 - a. more than one tiger.
 - b. one tiger.
 - c. no tiger.

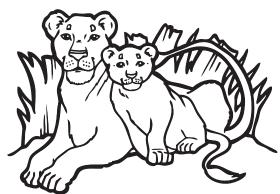

LIONS

Baby lions take a long time to grow up. Baby lions cannot hunt for themselves. For the first two years of their life, the mother lion finds food for them. They eat food that other animals have killed. They even steal food. The mother lion also teaches them how to stay safe.

When they are two years old, they go away from home. It is now time to find homes of their own. They know how to hunt, and they know how to find a place to live. It is time to make their new homes.

The lions will stay in this place, and they will have babies of their own. The mother lion will teach her new babies to hunt and find food. She will also teach them to stay safe. Her babies will turn two years old, and then they will leave to have families of their own.

- 1. How long do the lions stay with their mother?
 - a. 10 years
 - b. 3 years
 - c. 2 years
 - d. 5 years
- 2. Before they are two years old, how do the babies get food?
 - a. The mother lion finds food for them.
 - b. They kill it.
 - c. The man in the zoo gives it to them.
 - d. The man with the yellow hat brings it to them.
- 3. Why do the babies stay with their mother for so long?
 - a. so they can play and roll in the grass
 - b. so they can learn to hunt and take care of themselves
 - c. so they can talk to her

RED SQUIRREL

Have you ever seen a red squirrel? It is furry. Its hair is brown, gray, and white. It is short, and it has very sharp claws. It has teeth in the front of its mouth. The teeth are long and sharp. Its eyes are as black as coal. The ears are very little and sit on the back of the head.

When the baby is born, it has no hair and is blind. The mother has a nest in a tree or somewhere that is safe. The mother feeds the baby milk. She stays with it unless she is looking for food.

By the summer, the babies can see well. They have fur and are bigger. The babies can play out of the nest. They learn to find seeds, insects, and mushrooms.

When winter comes to the woods, babies can live alone. They have thick coats that are warm. They now know how to look for food and can build nests of their own.

- 1. When we read this story, we can guess that the red squirrel is . . .
 - a. a busy animal.
 - b. a lazy animal.
 - c. an angry animal.
 - d. an animal that likes to play games.
- 2. In the last paragraph, the author is telling you about . . .
 - a. the squirrel's eyes.
 - b. how the squirrel drinks the mother's milk.
 - c. how the squirrel finds seeds and plants.
 - d. how the squirrel is ready to live all alone.
- 3. The words "has no hair and is blind" mean . . .
 - a. the baby has no coat to stay warm.
 - b. the baby does not have any hair and it cannot see.
 - c. the baby does not have sun glasses.

NIGHT ANIMALS

Some animals hunt and look for mates at night while other animals sleep. To hunt at night, they have to hear very well. They have to see and smell well, too. They have to be able to touch well.

Owls have eyes that help them see in the dark. Foxes have large ears to help grab sounds. Their ears move to find out where the sounds come from. Cats use their whiskers to help them feel their way in the dark. Raccoons use their front paws to catch fish and frogs. They put their hands in the water and feel for the fish. Bats make high sounds. The sounds then bounce back to their ears. The sound is called an echo. It helps them tell where objects are.

Night animals have to use their senses to find food and mates.

STORY QUESTIONS

- 1. Which one is NOT a fact about night animals?
 - a. All night animals sleep in the night.
 - b. Some night animals can see in the dark.
 - c. Some night animals hunt in the night.
 - d. Night animals use their senses to help them find food.
- 2. What does a fox use to hear sounds?
 - a. his long tail

c. his long nose

b. his large ears

- d. his big eyes
- 3. Homophones are words that sound alike but have different meanings. Which one is used correctly?
 - a. Can you tell me wear to look for the bat?
 - b. Wear are the animals?
 - c. I would like to where my shoes.
 - d. The echo tells the bat where to go.

CHIPMUNK

Have you ever seen a chipmunk with extremely fat cheeks? The fat cheeks have pouches in them. They are like pockets to place food in. The fat cheeks make it easy to carry food back to its home. When their cheeks get filled, they start to puff outwards.

All day the chipmunks run around and look for food in the woods. They look for items such as acorns and other nuts. Seeds and berries are also things they like to eat. They nibble and munch all day long.

Chipmunks have very long toes with sharp nails. Their tails are long, black, and furry. Their ears are small, and they have black stripes running down their backs. Their fur is tan and their belly is white.

Chipmunks are a lot of fun to watch when they play. If they are stuffing their cheeks, it is the most fun of all.

- 1. An opinion is something that you think. Which one is an opinion about a chipmunk?
 - a. They stuff food in their cheeks.
- c. They have long, furry tails.
- b. They eat seeds and berries.
- d. They are cute.
- 2. What compound word could be added to the text above?
 - a. overcoat
 - b. paperclip
 - c. toenail
 - d. baseball
- 3. If you wanted to make a new title, it might be . . .
 - a. "The Busy Life of a Chipmunk."
 - b. "My Friend Chippy."
 - c. "How Chipmunks Eat Seeds."

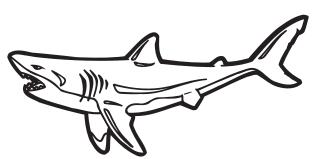

SHARKS

Sharks are one kind of fish. They live deep in the ocean where it is very cold. Sharks can be very large.

They do not have bones. They have cartilage. It is the same thing you have in your nose and ears. They have tiny slits in the side of their heads. These slits help them to breathe air. Their teeth are very sharp. Extra teeth are hidden inside. Sometimes they lose one tooth, and a new one will grow right back in. Some huge sharks can grow teeth that are as big as a hand.

Sharks like to eat meat, fish, and plants. Some sharks swim with their mouths open to catch plants. The plants stick to the sides of their mouths. Others eat seals or small animals in the ocean.

If you want to see a shark, the best and safest place is at the aquarium!

- 1. If sharks do not have bones, what keeps them together?
 - a. cartilage
 - b. teeth
 - c. bones
 - d. hands
- 2. This passage is written in . . .
 - a. no person at all
 - b. first person
 - c. second person
 - d. third person
- 3. Where is the safest place to see a shark?
 - a. park
 - b. circus
 - c. aquarium

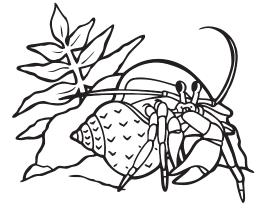

HERMIT CRAB

Have you ever gone to the beach? Have you seen a hermit crab? You might not know what they look like. You might not know where they live.

Hermit crabs are strange-looking animals. They have a round head that is soft. Hermit crabs have long legs that help them to move very fast. The legs have a lot of parts. Some hermit crabs are red while others can be brown or orange. Some hermit crabs are more than one color. Most of the time there are little hairs that stick out of their shells.

The hermit crabs do not have hard shells like other crabs. They have to find empty shells in the ocean to live in. When they grow, they find a new shell that is larger. These shells help to keep them safe. The hermit crab uses his claws to act like a door when it is inside a shell. It also uses its claw to grab food when it is hungry.

Hermit crabs are not like other crabs. They live in others' shells. This makes them special.

- 1. Which compound word above means "to be in something"?
 - a. outside
 - b. hermit
 - c. inside
 - d. empty
- 2. In the passage, the word grab can be changed to . . .
 - a. "take a hold of."
 - b. "throw."
 - c. "toss."
 - d. "play ball."

OSTRICH

Did you know that the ostrich is the biggest bird in the world? Did you know it has feathers? Did you know it can't fly? It cannot fly, but it can run fast—very fast. It uses its wings to flap up and down and keep it cool.

It is easy to tell if ostriches are boys or girls. Girls have brown and gray feathers. Boys have black feathers. They also have white feathers.

A male ostrich has one "main hen." He digs a nest for her, and she lays the eggs in it. They both take turns sitting on the eggs to keep them warm. He also has other hens, but only has a nest with one.

When the eggs are six weeks old, they hatch, and baby chicks are born. These babies have spotted necks, and their bodies are brown and gray. They look like fluffy fur balls. Their necks are long and so are their legs. The first day they can walk and get their own food.

By the time they are one year old, they are as tall as their parents and are having families of their own.

ONE-ROOM SCHOOLHOUSE

Amos and Elizabeth were walking to school. There was a lot of snow. It was 1885. They lived in Walnut Grove. They walked one mile to school every day.

Amos was seven, and Elizabeth was 10. They were in the same class. All of the kids in the town were in the same class. There were 17 students. Their school only had one room. It was called a one-room schoolhouse.

Amos started a fire in the big stove. It kept them warm on cold days. Lizzie cleaned the desks. Some desks were big, and some were small. They all sat in rows.

Miss Laura put slates on all of the desks. She put chalk in the front of the room. Lizzie cleaned the board with a wet cloth. Miss Laura opened the book to the right page.

The bell rang for school to start. All the children came to school. They put their coats on the hooks in the hall. They put their lunches down by their desks. They took the snow off their boots. All of the students stood up to say the pledge to the flag.

The children then ate lunch and played games in the middle of the day. Some children played marbles. Others jumped rope and played clapping games. Some children ran races. Some played ball with sticks.

When the day was over, the children got their books and walked home.

HENRY LEARNS TO FLY

Henry was lying down in the grass. He did not want anyone to see him. The grass was tall, so he was safe.

Two brothers were working not far away. They were making something that looked funny. It had two wheels. One was in the front. The other was in the back.

"Hey, Orville, could you help me with this?" asked Wilbur.

The boys worked and worked. They put something on top of the wheels. The boys got on, and it started to move. It went faster and faster.

Henry yelled, "What are you doing?"

"We are trying to fly," they said.

"Can I learn how to fly, too?" he asked.

"Maybe," they said.

Henry went home and asked his mother. She said, "Yes." Henry watched and waited. In 1903, they made something that had a motor, and it had wings. It was made of cloth. It was made of wood.

GRANDPA AND THE FIVE AND DIME

Little Kip snuggled up in Grandpa Allen's lap. "Tell me a story," he said.

"What kind of story?" asked Grandpa.

"I want to hear a story about the five and dime store," Kip said. "I want you to tell me about how you met Grandma."

"All right," said Grandpa. "It was a long time ago—1923. I was 15. One day my dad left. My mom did not make lots of money. We had three boys to feed."

"So what did you do, Grandpa?"

"I did what I had to do. I got a job."

"Were you old enough, Grandpa?"

"No. I had to tell them I was older. They gave me the job and I worked very hard. The store was called Woolworths. Everything was five or 10 cents."

"That's not a lot of money," said Kip.

"Not now, it isn't. But, at that time it was a lot of money. It was hard. There was a war. Not many people had money for extra things."

"So, what about Grandma?"

"Well, one day we got a new clerk. She was very pretty. She was nice. I liked her right away. I could not ask her on a date. We could not date people at our jobs." "So what did you do?"

TOLL HOUSE COOKIES

In 1930, Tim and his family were staying at an inn for the night. The inn was called the Toll House Inn.

Mrs. Wakefield was baking cookies. She and Ken owned the inn.

Mrs. Wakefield asked Tim, "Would you like to help me make cookies?"

"Sure," said Tim. "What can I do?"

"You can mix the dough," she said.

"I am good at mixing. I help my mom all of the time."

"Oh, dear," she said. "I am out of baking chocolate. What will I do?"

Tim watched as Mrs. Wakefield took out a bar of chocolate. She cut it into little pieces.

"What are you going to do with that candy bar?" asked Tim.

"I am making it into chunks," she said.

"Why are you going to do that? Why not just eat the chocolate?" asked Tim.

"I am going to try something new. It will be a test. We will see how it turns out," she said.

"Okay," said Tim, as he mixed in the pieces.

Mrs. Wakefield put scoops of the cookie dough onto a cookie sheet. She put it into the oven to bake.

When the cookies came out, she looked surprised. "This is new."

THE MEAT PLANT

It was 1955. Lloyd was 19 years old. His best friend, Ken, was 19, too. They needed to get jobs. They needed to earn money.

They got a job in a meat plant. The meat plant was in Kansas. It was called Armour and Company.

Lloyd had to work on the line. His job was to take the bacon off the line. He had to put in under a big roller. The roller looked like a big rolling pin. It was as big as a tree stump. The roller pressed the meat and made it into bacon.

Lloyd also had to take the pork loins off the belt. He had to put them into a big metal chute. It looked like a slide from the park. It had a big mouth. It was six feet long. It had a hole at both ends. The meat went through the chute. It came out the other side. Ken cut the fat off the meat. He had to do it by hand. He had to cut it with a sharp knife.

Other workers put the meat into boxes. They put it on trucks. The trucks took it to stores, and the stores sold it to the people.

It was cool in the plant. All the workers wore sweatshirts. It was like being in a big freezer. They all had jobs until the meat was all cut. When there were no more orders for meat, the plant closed down. It stayed closed until someone needed a lot of meat again.

IN THE MINE

Will and his friend were looking for work. They saw an ad in the paper. It said, "Good jobs! Good pay! Work in the mines of Montana! Apply today!"

Will and his friend called the mine. The mine said they had work if the boys wanted to work.

They each packed a small bag. They got into Will's car and drove to Montana.

Will got a job driving a train in the mine. Billy got a job loading sand.

Every night they started working at 6 P.M. They went down into the mine. They rode in a small box with no windows. Each boy brought a lunch. They each wore a helmet and a jacket.

Will had to work with Billy. Will drove the train. Billy put the sand on the cars that Will pulled with the engine.

Billy opened the chute and filled each car with sand.

Will drove the train to the spot that had been dug out. The ore was gone. The miners had sent it to the top of the mine. He poured the sand in the hole, and he added water.

He and Billy packed the sand. They packed it so the mine would not cave in. The sand would keep the city from sinking into the ground.

It was a cold job. The tunnels had no light. Will used the light on his helmet to see where to drive. Billy zipped up his jacket. They worked hard and fast.

It was the summer or 1953. George just got a job on a big boat. The boat ran on the Great Lakes. It went from Wisconsin to Ohio every three days. The boat took many things back and forth.

George and his friend, Petey, both got jobs on the ship.

"Hey, George, what job did you get?" asked Petey.

"The captain says I am to work as a deck hand," said George.

"I am going to work in the engine room," said Petey. "I think I would like it better outside. I am not sure I want to stay in a room with a lot of noise."

"It will be okay," said George. "We can read books when we get off work. They have a library. They have a mess hall too. The food looks very good. I think I want to eat five times a day."

"Good luck with that! I want to paint the ship and clean the deck. I want to tie the ship up when we get into port. I want to clean the hold of the ship," said Petey.

"You need to talk to the boss. I think you have the wrong job," said George. "Maybe we could trade."

"I think that would be great," said Petey. "I need the fresh sea air. I need to stretch my legs. You are good with engines, and you can fix anything that breaks. You are the man for the job!"

FRANK

"I just hate math," said Frank. "Do you like it, Sam?"

"I do," I said. "It is my best subject."

My real name is Samantha J. Bruger. I am sitting by Frank. I don't think it will be fun. I think he will bug me. We are in the first grade, room 21. It is my first day at a new school. My family just moved here from another state. My dad got a new job, and we have to go to a new school.

"Take out your pencil," Frank said. "It is time for math."

"It is already on my desk. See?"

He looked at my desk. I was ready. The math book was propped open and the answers were already done.

"Wow," said Frank. "When did you do that?"

"Just now. It only took two minutes."

Frank raised his hand. "Ms. Smith, do you think I can sit by Sam all year?"

"I don't know, Frank. A year is a long time. Why do you ask?"

"Well, I think she is real good at math. If I sit by her some of that 'goodness in math' might rub off on me!"

THE BIG GAME

Coach R was the best coach. His hair was thin. He always wore his "best coach" jacket. We never saw him without it. He wore his blue sweat pants and his white shoes. He never got mad at us. He just looked funny if we did something wrong. His face would get red. He would put his board in his bag.

"Girls, it is all about the basics—just the basics. We win as a team, we lose as a team."

We all smiled. Before every game he said the same thing. "Remember the basics."

When we were on the field, we had to do what he said. Trap. Control. Pass. Dribble. Shoot. That is the way he wanted it done.

Today was no different. We all wanted to win. It was the last game of the year. Our team wanted the trophy. If not the trophy, we wanted the medals. It was our day. The prize was for us to have.

The sun was shining. We were getting hot. We gave our mittens to our moms and dads. Our team went on the field to play soccer.

"Trap. Control. Pass. Dribble. Shoot. Shoot. Shoot."

We shot. We scored. Our team listened to Coach R and we won. It was a great day. He is the best coach a team could have!

MISSING MONEY

"Where is my lunch money?" sobbed Bill. "I just had it in my pocket."

His teacher heard him crying. "Where do you think you lost it?"

"I think I dropped it when I got out of the car."

"Do you want to go back out and look?"

"Yes, but I don't want to go alone."

"Go. Take Peter with you. Both of you can look on the sidewalk on the way to the parking lot."

They walked with their heads down. There was no money on the sidewalk.

No quarter was in the parking lot.

"Hey, Bill, look! I found two pennies."

"You can keep those. Nobody can get lunch with two pennies."

The two boys went to the office. They talked to the secretary.

"How much money did you lose?" she asked.

"I lost 25 cents," said Bill. He wasn't crying any more.

"I think this might be your lucky day. I think this belongs to you! A little boy came into the office. He found one quarter by the cars. He wanted to make sure I kept it safe."

PARTY

My name is Chris. Today is my birthday. I am eight years old. My mom is planning a party after school. We will have blue balloons and blue ice cream. All of the games have blue prizes, and I want to get a blue bike with shiny handles.

The day is going slowly. I keep watching the clock. It is only 9:00 A.M. That is when we have math. I love math. It makes me think of my birthday. Two dollars, plus four dollars, plus six dollars is twelve dollars. I will get that much money from my sisters. Three balloons and seven balloons make ten balloons. There are thirteen balloons in all. Six party hats and

"Chris, can you come to the board and do the math problem?"

"What did you say, Miss D? Are you talking to me?"

"Yes, Chris, I wanted you to add the numbers on the board?"

"Do they have chocolate cake or games? Do they have balloons or bikes?"

"Chris, what are you talking about? I want you to add six and eleven on the board."

"I'm sorry, Miss D. I guess I was thinking about my birthday. It is today."

"Right, Chris. We remembered. Your mom is bringing cake at 3:00. Remember?"

"I remember."

SKIING

Have you ever gone to the mountains? Have you even felt the wind in your hair? I have. It feels nice when the wind blows in my ears. The wind makes a soft noise. My ears feel cold.

We go to Big Bear Mountain. My family likes to ski. We all rent skis at the lodge. I get size 3 boots. They are black. My dad helps me with the buckles. He pushes them down tight.

I carry my skis. They are short and shiny. It is hard to carry them, because they are almost as big as I am. I put them on when I get outside. The poles stand alone in the snow. The boots make a snapping sound when I put my feet into them. The snap means they are on. It means they are ready to go.

Next, I head up to the ski lift. We ride to the top of the small mountain. My dad and I race to the bottom. He is very fast. Dad doesn't even use his poles.

We go up and down. My mom and I ski together. Dad and I ski together. I ski with my sisters. The wind blows in my hair.

When the sun goes down, we are tired. Dad and I go to take off our skis. My sister turns in her snowboard. We all put on our boots. Our feet smell. Time to go home and rest.

AFTER SCHOOL

"Can we go to the park?" I asked my mom. "Can we go after school?"

"We can," she said. "Don't forget to bring your skates."

"I won't," I promised. Skating is the thing I like best about the park.

All day long I think about the park. I dream. I plan. I am hoping I will see my friend. The day seemed so long.

"Hurry up, day!" I hear myself say. "Hurry up and get to 3:00. I want to go to the park."

My mother is waiting after school. My sisters and I hop into the car. We are happy. We all love the park.

"Guess what?" Mom asks.

"What?" we all say at the same time.

"I stopped and got us a bucket of chicken."

"Yes!" we shouted. "Did you remember the biscuits?"

"The biscuits, yes. The cold slaw, yes. The macaroni, yes. I have them all."

"Mom, you are the greatest!" we cried.

"Well, munchkins. I don't know about that, but I want to get to the park. I can hear my skates calling my name. Let's go!"

FIGHT

"Fight! Fight!" yelled the kids.

The playground looked like ants running everywhere.

Two boys were in the center fighting. They were punching each other. They were throwing fists. Both boys were saying bad words and calling each other bad names.

It did not look good. I did not want to get in the middle of that fight. A boy pushed me as I stood on the circle. I fell into one of the boys that were fighting. He punched me in the head.

"That hurt!" I yelled. "Stop it! I do not want to fight with you. Let go of me!"

Now both boys were punching me. One hit my head. The other punched me in the tummy. It was not a good day at all. I did not want to fight. Why was I in the middle of a war?

Mr. Jones came out of the lunchroom. He opened the door and gave the "dirty look." We all stopped. I stared. My arms had bruises on them. The kids were all pointing to me. It was a nightmare,

Lucky for me, my mom came to wake me up in a few minutes. She pulled my pillow and touched my nose. I was still asleep when I said, "Do not punch me again. I might get a bloody nose!"

MY HAIR

When I woke up, I could feel it was going to be a bad day.

I looked in the mirror. My hair was standing up. It looked like a tree.

I screamed, "Mom, I look like a tree."

She said, "That's nice, dear. Please get ready for school."

I yelled, "Mom, my hair is sticking up on my head."

"That's nice, dear. Please, put on your clothes."

I could see waves all over my head. It looked like the ocean.

"Mom!"

"What!"

"I need help. My hair is a mess. I can't go to school like this. All of my friends will laugh at me."

"That's nice, dear. Please, eat your toast."

I walked down to the kitchen. Mom looked at me. "What is wrong with your hair?"

"I don't know," I said. "I guess it is a bad hair day."

"I guess so," said my mother.

NO HOMEWORK

My name is Carol Ann G. My friends called me "Cee" for short. I like the name. It works for me. I want to be a reporter when I grow up. This is my story.

It was the day before vacation. We were all very happy about that. Our class had talked about vacation. We talked about the things we wanted to do. We talked about where we wanted to go. We talked about what we would see.

It was just fine until Kirk stood up. He wanted a turn to talk. I don't like him much. He is always bossy and mean. Kirk always hits other kids at recess. He is never friendly. "I will be going to Florida," Kirk said. "I will go to the beach and make sandcastles. My sister and I will play in the sand. We will buy hot dogs. The sun will be hot, and we will visit water parks."

"Thank you, Kirk," said my teacher. "That sounds like fun."

We all felt bad. Our ideas were not like Kirk's. We were not going to water parks. We would not go to the beach. This was Minnesota. It was cold. Snow was everywhere. We would read books. We would walk in the white snow. We would make snow angels.

The bell rang to end class. Our teacher stood up. She said, "We will all do different things on vacation. We will all see different things. The best part, I think, is that we will have no homework!"

We cheered! She was right. We smiled and went home happy.

BEST FRIENDS

I am Josh. My best friend is Joey, and we always play together. We walk to school together. We play at recess. He hits the ball first, and then I hit the ball second. Sometimes we take turns. We share our lunches. Joey gives me a snack, and I give him a snack. We tell secrets. We find frogs together. We play soccer in my backyard. We call each other on the phone. Joey and I tell jokes, and we laugh.

Today Joey said he was moving away. His dad got a new job, and they have to live in another place.

I went home mad. I kicked the door. I hit the mailbox. I ripped up my homework.

"What is wrong?" Mom asked.

"Joey is moving away," I said.

"You can write letters," said Mom.

"That is not good. I don't like writing letters."

"You can call him on the phone," said Mom.

"It is not the same as seeing him every day," I said.

"You can make new friends. There is a new boy just up the street. His mother said he is looking for a friend. They just moved in."

"I do not want a new friend. I want Joey," I said.

THE BIG "D"

I am so happy today. My mom said that we are going for the big "D" tomorrow. I asked her what the big "D" was. She said the big drive to Grammy's house. Mommy says that we will stay there for a few days.

Daddy will have to stay home. He is very busy at work and cannot go. He will have to work late. He will have to cook his own dinner too. He will also have to make his own lunches.

Daddy read me a story at night. He kissed me. Dad said he would miss me very much. I started to cry. It is okay to cry, he says.

My mom packed my best red shirt. I got it for Christmas. I also wanted to take my blue pants and a picture of my daddy.

I know that time will go fast. I know I will see my daddy soon. My Grammy will fix me a pie to make me feel better. There will be lots of fun things to do. I will help Grammy with her garden. I will sit and swing with Grammy.

MOVING DAY

"Do you have your doll, Kali?" asked my dad.

"Yes, Dad," said Kali.

"Andy, put the dog in the truck," said dad.

"Okay, Dad."

"Mom, are you ready to go? We have to get going. Did you pack a lunch?"

"I did. I made tuna sandwiches with cheese."

"Yes!" we yelled. "Tuna with cheese!"

"Don't spill them in my new truck," said Dad.

We all hopped into the new, black truck. It was shiny. The engine was loud. Dad and Mom hopped in. We closed the doors, and Dad started the truck.

"I love this truck," said Andy.

"Me, too," I said. "It has a nice ride."

Mom turned on the radio. We all started to sing loudly.

"Hi, Ho, Hi, Ho, it's off to a new town we go."

Mom giggled. Dad laughed.

I stopped singing. "Dad, are you scared?"

"I guess I am, just a little bit. Why do you ask?"

"Well, I am a little scared. I am excited, too. Is that okay?"

THAT'S MY DOG!

"Thumper," I called. "Thumper, where are you?"

Our family just came home. We had been away for one week.

"Thumper," I called. "Thumper, we are home," I called.

Mom looked for Thumper. Dad looked for Thumper. He wasn't around.

"Thumper," we called.

"I think he is missing," I said.

We looked in the garage. We looked in the doghouse. No Thumper. He was not at the house.

We went in the house. We unpacked our bags. All I could do was think about Thumper. Was he hurt? Had he run away? Where was my dog?

I tried to unpack my bags. I tried to think about other things. My mind kept going back to Thumper. I started to cry.

I heard the phone ring. Dad was talking to someone. He was laughing.

"Teresa," Dad called. "Please come down here. Someone wants to talk to you!" "Who is it, Dad?"

"You will see," he said with a smile.

I took the phone. "Hey, girl. It is Grandpa Allen."

"Hi, Grandpa, what's up?"

CODES

"I want to be a secret agent," said A.L. "I want to write secret codes."

"Me, too," said S.B. "I think that would be cool."

We both wanted to be secret agents. Now was a good time to start. We were in first grade, Room 12.

My name is Ashley Lynne, and my best friend is Samantha Bean. We go by A.L. and S.B. for short.

Our teacher thinks we are very smart. We don't want to let her down, so we are going to show her what we can do. She says secret agents are smart, so we are going to be secret agents.

"I have a new code," I told S.B. at recess.

"I have one, too," she said.

We both took out our codes. I had made mine using letters. S.B. had made hers using pictures.

"I like them both, A.L.," she said. "I have an idea."

"What is it?" I asked.

"Why don't we use your code on Monday and Wednesday. We could use mine on Tuesday and Thursday. On Friday we could mix them and use them both."

THE CAT HAS MY TONGUE!

I woke up this morning. I was not feeling good. My head hurt, and my eyes felt like glue. There was green stuff in my nose. I was sure I was getting sick.

My mom came in to wake me up, "Time to get out of bed, Sweet Pea."

I nodded. I tried to smile, but my mouth was not working. I rolled over and groaned. "Are you okay?" my mom asked.

I gave her those sad eyes. My mouth opened, but nothing came out.

"Sweet Pea, what is the matter with you. You do not look good. I think something is very wrong."

I shook my head. Grabbing a pencil I wrote her a note. This is what it said.

Mom,

I think I am sick. My eyes hurt and my tongue is broken.

Can you get me a new tongue at the store?

THE MISSING DOG

Today is my first day on this job. My name is Booker T. My friends call me Big B for short. I am a detective. Someday I want to be famous. For now, I work for my friends.

This morning I had a knock at my door. I went to see who was there. It was my friend, Karen. She looked sad. She looked like something was wrong.

"Come in," I said. "Are you okay?"

"Of course, I am not okay! That is why I am here to see you," she said. Her face was getting very red.

"Are you hot?" I asked.

"Not hardly," she said. "I just need you to solve a mystery for me."

"I am here to serve," I said with a smile.

She poured out the whole story. It seems someone had stolen her dog. It was a greyhound. His name was Jeb. He was the fastest dog on the block.

I listened to the whole story. "Do you have any leads?" I asked.

"None," she said. "Just these dog biscuits I found in the front yard."

"That will be a good place to start," I said. I grabbed my jacket and hat.

BROCCOLI

It was early in the morning. The sun was coming in my window. It was so warm on my face.

"Time to open the shades," I heard myself say out loud.

I pulled back the shades. My eyes just about popped out of my head.

"Is this real?" I asked myself. "Yes, it is real!"

I looked again. I closed my eyes. It was still there. The backyard was full of giant pieces of broccoli. They were as big as my house. They were green with large tops. The tops looked like they needed a lawn mover.

"Mom!" I yelled. "Please come to my room!"

She came up the stairs. Mom went to the window. She looked at the broccoli. "Wow," she said. "Wow! Wow! Wow!"

"There is broccoli everywhere!" I said.

"I know," she said, "but it is huge. It is scary, and it is growing on top of my garden."

"Whom are you going to call, Mom?"

"I think I will call Broccoli Busters. What do you think?"

"I think that is a good plan. Can I go back to bed?"

GREAT BALLS OF FIRE!

"Great balls of fire!" I heard the old man yell. He was sitting in the park. Next to him was a shopping cart. It was full of junk. His name was Henry. I saw him on my way home from school every day.

"Hi, Henry!" I called.

He waved. "How are you, Hester Sue? Great balls of fire!" he yelled again.

"How was your day, Henry?" I called.

"Same as yesterday," he said. "Great balls of fire!"

"Are you okay?" I asked.

"Sure," he said. "Great balls of fire!"

I walked over to the bench. I looked at his cart. It had the same stuff in it from yesterday. "Do you need help, Henry?" I asked.

This time he jumped up and yelled, "Great balls of fire! Great balls of fire!"

I didn't know what to do, so I just sat down on the bench. He sat down and took off his shoe.

I looked inside. There was a small, sharp rock. It was stuck in his sock. "Let me take that out," I said.

He said, "Sure thing."

I took out the rock. It was sharp. "It would hurt real bad if it was in my shoe," I said. "Great balls of fire!" I said.

CANDY PLANET

"We've landed," said John. He hopped out of the spaceship.

"Where are we?" asked Fred. "It looks strange."

"The map says Candy Planet. Let's look around."

The boys shut the door and started walking.

"The sidewalks are chocolate," said John. "Look, the letters H-E-R-S-H-E-Y are on the path."

"What does H-E-R-S-H-E-Y spell?"

"It spells Hershey. Like Hershey's[®] chocolate."

"Mmmm. Can we eat the sidewalk?"

"I don't think so," said Fred.

They kept walking. They saw tall buildings. They were made from the biggest candy bars anybody has ever seen. On some buildings, there were peanuts for windows. Caramel was painted on some the doors. Gum was used to keep the parts of the building together.

The city life was filled with candy. Streetlights had red, green, and yellow gumdrops on them. Cars were all shapes and sizes. Some were made out of chocolate, some were made out of mint candies, and some were made out of jellybeans. The tires on the cars were Life Savers[®]. The people had different kinds of licorice pieces for their hair. Some people had red licorice, and others had black licorice.

"This is great," said John.

"This makes my teeth hurt," said Fred.

The boys looked up in the sky. There were marshmallows for clouds. All of a sudden, it started to rain chocolate drops. They ran quickly back to the spaceship.

"Time to go home!"

WAFFLEHEAD

"Help! I'm being chased by a waffle!" Amber screamed.

"You are being chased by a what?" I asked.

"I am being chased by a big, fat waffle!" velled Amber.

"Wafflehead! Wafflehead!" screamed the other kids.

I, Ashley, stopped fast. I looked down at my feet. Waffle feet. I looked at my arms. Waffle arms. I looked at my body. It was like a waffle, too.

"Do I still have hair?" I asked Amber.

"Only a little."

"Can you still see my eyes?"

"Only a little, but they are flat and long."

"Is my body flat in the front and flat in the back?"

"Yes," she said, "You look just like a big waffle."

"Help, me, Amber. Take me to the nurse."

"I will," said Amber, "if someone does not eat you first."

We tried to walk to the nurse.

Kids tried to bite me. They tried to pull on my legs. They tried to rip off a part of my waffle. It was not pretty. It did not feel good.

WISHES

Have you ever wanted to have someone else's feet? I have. My sister has tiny feet. Mine are big. Very big! She has size 2, and I have size 6. I always have wanted my sister's feet.

Today when I went to put on my shoes, they did not fit. My feet slipped right in and right back out. What was wrong with me?

I looked at the shoes. They were mine. I tried again. Too big. In fact, they looked like clown shoes. Maybe it was the laces. I tied the laces tighter. No use. The shoes were still too big.

I heard a scream from my sister's room. Mom and I both ran to her room. She was crying on the floor. Jessica was holding her feet. They were huge. She was looking at her shoes.

"Mom," she said, "I got monster feet last night! My shoes don't fit. What am I going to do?"

Mom said, "I don't know. Do your feet hurt?"

I looked at my feet. I looked at Jessie's feet. An idea came to me. I ran to my bedroom and got my shoes. She gave me her shoes. We put them on. We both looked funny.

I didn't want to tell her what had happened. All I can say is I hope all my other wishes do not come true!

CANDICE

My name is Candice, and I am a toaster. My home is in the kitchen, but not for very long.

I found out some very exciting news about me. Suzi is going to college, and she is taking me with her. I have always wanted to go to college. I have always wanted to travel.

I found out all about it last night. Suzi and her mom came to the kitchen, and they had a talk.

"Hey, Suzi, what do you think about traveling? Do you want to see the world? Do you want to go to college?"

Suzi nodded her head. "Yes, I want to go! When do I leave? What will I do? What things will I see?"

"I don't know what you will see," said her mother. "I do know some things. You will need to take some things with you. You can take my toaster to cook waffles and toast. If you want English muffins, you can cook them in the toaster, too."

"What else do I need? Will you leave me alone? Will the city be big?"

"You will stay in a small room with another girl. I will stay with you for awhile, but then you will be on your own."

Suzi then became sad thinking about not seeing her mom. Little does she know that I will talk to her and keep her company while I cook her waffles and toast!

A LOLLIPOP?

Last Tuesday I woke up late. My clock did not work, and Mom did not wake me up. It was a strange day.

When I got out of bed, I went plop, right in the middle of the floor. I got up. Plop! I fell again. I looked down. My feet had turned into a stick. My feet were one, long white, cardboard stick.

I bounced to the mirror. My head was a lollipop. It was a big, round, cherry lollipop. I was a sucker!

"Help! Mom! Help!"

Mom came running to my room. She sat on my bed. Mom laughed and laughed. She could not stop laughing. Mom laughed until she cried.

"Where is my Candice and what have you done with her?" she asked.

"I am Candice," I said.

"You sound like Candice," said Mom.

"I am Candice," I said.

"You smell like Candice," said Mom. "Okay, Candice, change back to the little girl I once knew."

Poof! In a flash I was back to normal. Thank goodness for moms!

MARTIANS

A loud noise hit the roof. Sandy jumped out of bed. Her head hit the top of the bed. She got a big bump. Her slippers were missing.

"Ouch! What was that noise?" she asked.

Bump. Bump. Thud. The noise came again. Sandy went to the window. She tried to open it. She pushed and pushed. It would not open.

Sandy went to the door of her house. She tried to open it. She pushed and pushed. It would not open.

"Whatever is the matter?" She went to the phone. She called her mother.

Her mother was sleeping. She woke up when the phone rang.

"Hello."

"Mother, something is outside the house. I cannot open the windows or doors."

"Look through the glass. I think there are huge Martians with wings on their backs outside," said Mother. "Show them a big smile and see if they are friendly."

Sandy went to the window and saw one of the Martians. She smiled really big and watched to see what they would do.

One Martian flew to the window and opened it for Sandy. Then he flew to the door and opened it. He shook her hand and then flew back to the top of the roof where his spaceship was parked.

"Wow! Martians can be friendly and helpful!" Sandy said to herself.

JELLYBEANS AND ME

"Hey, Buster, come look out the window," said my brother.

"Why?" I asked. My new book was too good. It was called Jellybeans and Me.

"Come here now!" he yelled. "You have to see this."

I put my book down on the couch. I walked to the window to look outside.

"What is it?" I asked.

"Look outside. Look next door."

"Holy Cow! Mom, come and look outside!" I yelled.

"Oh, my," said Mom. "We should call the police right away." She went to the phone to dial 911.

"Hello," said the voice.

"Hello," said my mother. "I think you had better come to our house right away."

"What is wrong?" asked the voice. "How can I help?"

"There are jellybeans next door. They are blue, green, and yellow. They have legs, arms, and heads. These jellybeans have eyes and hats. I can see a big moving van. It looks like they are moving into the house next door. They have many boxes and bags."

"Do they look dangerous?"

"I don't know. They are just jellybeans."

"Lady, are you okay? Do you have a fever? Do you need a doctor?" the voice asked.

"Yes, I think I am okay. Please come now! I don't want neighbors that are jellybeans," said mother.

I smiled.

VANISHING VEGGIES

Tuesdays are strange at my house. My mom doesn't think so, but I know that it is true. Every day my mom always fixes dinner. She always fixes me veggies. She always makes me eat beans. She makes me eat corn. She makes me eat carrots. They are veggies, and I hate veggies.

Every night she puts the veggies on my plate. But for some strange reason, on Tuesdays they just disappear. They just go away a little at a time. I do not know where they go, but they go. I wiggle my nose. Some veggies go away. I clap my hands. A few more veggies go away. I smile at my mom, and even more veggies go away.

My mom gets mad. She says, "Sarah, where are your veggies?"

I smile, "They are gone, Mom. They have disappeared."

"Where did they go?"

"I do not know where they went. They just went away."

She says, "Well then, I will have to give you some more."

I say, "That is okay. Today is Tuesday, and they will just go away. Give me more, Mom!"

Mom gives me more, and they start to go away. My mother does not see them disappear. I cannot see where they go.

She says, "Tuesdays are so strange. I think we will eat fruit on Tuesdays."

"I love fruit," I said. "Tuesdays will be the best days of all!"

STORY QUESTIONS

- 1. Why happens to Sarah's veggies on Tuesdays?
 - a. They dance on her plate.
- c. They swim over her plate.
- b. They hide under her plate.
- d. They disappear off her plate.
- 2. What does Mom decide to do?
 - a. stare at her veggies

- c. buy veggies off the truck
- b. give her less veggies
- d. give her fruit on Tuesdays
- 3. Which one is NOT a fact that happens in the story on Tuesdays?
 - a. She claps her hands. The veggies go away.
 - b. She wiggles her nose. The veggies go away.
 - c. She eats the veggies that are on her plate.
 - d. Mom says, "Sarah, where are your veggies?"

SOLDIERS UNDER MY BED

Bang! Bang! Bang!

I woke up with a start. What was that noise? I lay very still. My ears were open wide.

Bang! Bang! Bang!

"What is that noise?" I asked myself.

"It is the soldiers under your bed. They play war at night," said my teddy bear.

I sat up in bed. "Are you talking to me, Mr. Teddy Bear?"

"I am. Look under your bed. The soldiers fight at night. Didn't you hear them before?"
"No. I was sleeping at night."

"Look and see," said Mr. Teddy Bear. "But do not let them see you!"

I put my head over the bed. The soldiers were lying on the floor. They had their guns in their hands. They were fighting and rolling. It was amazing. Their voices sounded tiny. They were shouting and yelling.

I sat up. "Mr. Teddy Bear, do they always fight at night?" I asked.

"Most of the time. They want the toy box. The team that wins gets to sleep under there."

"Wow," I said. "Soldiers fighting over a toy box. Who would have guessed?"

STORY QUESTIONS

- 1. How do you think the child felt when he heard the noise?
 - a. brave

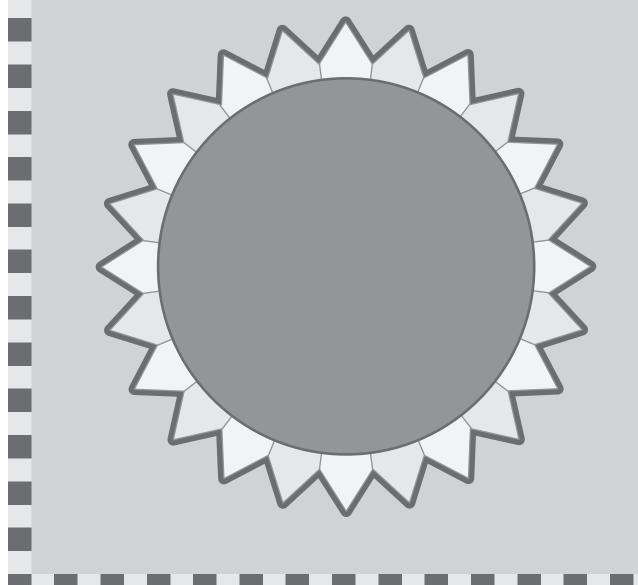

c. mad

b. scared

d. sad

- 2. What made the noise?
 - a. a ball bouncing
 - b. tiny soldiers fighting
 - c. mother knocking on the door
 - d. tree branches blowing against the window
- 3. What were they fighting about?
 - a. who gets to play with Mr. Teddy Bear
 - b. who gets to jump on the toy box
 - c. who would sleep under the toy box
 - d. who would get to play outside
